

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A network system has a hub site and a plurality of remote sites. A satellite is used for transmitting data to and from the hub site and the remote site. The available bandwidth of the network is divided into separate channels for transmitting and receiving data. In the network call control and management between the hub site and the remote site use internet protocol (IP) addressing for identification.